Notes on Contributors

C. Fred Blake is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Hawai‘i. His research interests focus on how modalities of cultural meaning, such as memory, ideology, and aesthetic compositions, are produced, embodied, and understood in discursive practices that mediate various historical formations. His work mostly deals with China and its diasporic communities.

Andrew Belsey is Lecturer in Philosophy at Cardiff University. In addition to recent publications on ethical issues in journalism, he is author of many papers on philosophy, literature, and the history of ideas. With Catherine Belsey he has also written ‘Christina Rossetti: Sister to the Brotherhood’, Textual Practice, 2 (1988).

Catherine Belsey chairs the Centre for Critical and Cultural Theory at Cardiff University. Her books include Desire: Love Stories in Western Culture and Shakespeare and the Loss of Eden.

Janet Browne is Reader in History of Biology at the Wellcome Institute for the History of Medicine, London. She is author of Charles Darwin: Voyaging; The Secular Ark: Studies in the History of Biogeography; and editor of the British journal, History of Science.
